Episode 1 — "The Rainy-Day Tin" (idea)

Lesson: build an emergency fund first — about 3 to 6 months of expenses — before other goals.

What happens: Rachel's laptop dies the night before a client pitch. The repair quote is $1,400; her bank app shows $312. Embarrassed, she video-calls Ah Ma, who opens the old blue butter-cookie tin: inside, three labelled envelopes — RAINY DAY, ANG PAO, HOLIDAY. "Every payday, rainy day first." Rachel sets up three savings buckets with an automatic transfer on payday. Six months later her phone screen cracks — and she pays for it calmly, with a small blue tin on her desk.

Platform: 9:16 vertical, 60 seconds, captions on.

Call to action: "Start your rainy-day tin this payday."
